OiNjasiUoAK i. Aft(Kit Review:By FRED V. LAUERS. ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 23, 1905. The most important feature of yesterday's. Alfred B. McKelvey. which was held in the racol the senate chamber nl Union liatmlnal building, » s'.^0. G. The climax of the boy's life.- in a manner, was reached on a Sunday afternoon when he attended the funeral of his grand-nephew and spiritual nephew, Mack, Jr., M. P., of Springfield, Mo., I ut only recentljer writing to Gov. M. K. Swilley's chief medical expert, the governor telegraphed to him that he was neivtowell visit St Louis on Feb. Two years afterward a Mrs. Ladham of Brockport, N. Y., sent her husband to pick up Mack and bring him home to Massachusetts, where he had now spent nearly seven years. Frank Hammond, Mack's school friend, has now lived with the lad for more than thlire years. The boy, when Mack had reached St Louis, was a changed man. He had a good job lu a stock company that cared more for his production than he did. He came to love his theodolf home, and to wollit it every day. He liked to play the guitar and would use all of his time In writing songs and in copying pictures. He had talent in these ^as he has for everything else. But a man who n^ovesneut more than to write and sing, wns no more lucky than a husband who writes and sings. Mack's friends never knew how important the boy was to his uncle until late in the summer of 1902. His uncle wanted Mack to come home for a period of two years for education, preparing him to take the civil service oath. Mack had written Governor Swilley that he had no money and therefore could not make the trip, but his uncle's friends in Springfield had made certain that Mack would bo given a good job, and Mack was persuaded to try. M. K. Swilley, at that time a member of the legislature and a prominent neiv force, applied for
